

Engagement

Use

Approximation

Demonstration

Cambourne's Conditions for Learning create a supportive classroom environment that encourages growth and discovery for students of any age.

-Sarah Goff

How We Learn

Cambourne's Conditions for Learning

Having Cambourne's eight conditions present in both school and home environments, creates the best opportunity for authentic language to be acquired. Those in a child's environment should understand these conditions to support language development in young learners.

These conditions were seen in our own learning with our Butler professors and colleagues, and observed in our practicum classrooms. We were able to see learning as an ongoing, individualized process with different connecting points. Having the conditions present in the classroom helps us to honor the process for all learners.

Immersion

Feedback

Expectation

Responsibility